ADIOS, PUEBLO EVITA

It is hard to believe that it is almost nineteen years since I first came to work at Pueblo Evita as assistant manager to Miguel Muñoz in 1992. The Clubhouse was just being built and the first Elite Apartments were being prepared in Block 11, although they were known then as "Luxury" apartments.

Having been sent to spend some time as assistant manager in Four Seasons by VCI, the management company that originally were responsible for looking after Pueblo Evita, I was thrilled to be asked back as manager in 1994. That was the year we got inspected for our first Gold Crown Award.

I had fallen for the informal family atmosphere of the resort and the keen and enthusiastic team, many of whom are well known and familiar faces to you our owners. I could not have wished for a better boss than Martin Beesley, who handed me the responsibility of running the resort but was always available to discuss things with, or argue about or to give advice. It didn't matter what heavy discussion or disagreement we might have had as developer and resort manager, we always finished having a coffee or cup of tea as Phil and Martin. What a nice way to work.

When my husband was ill and we knew he would not make it – he said to me "Phil, not only do you have our own family, but you also have your family in Pueblo Evita" and he was right.

I have had many happy years working in Pueblo Evita, but I am now looking towards a new life as a retired person. It will be nice to be able to travel without having to fit it in to suitable holiday dates.

I wish Dagmara as much enjoyment in her new role as manager for Pueblo Evita as I have had, and also lots of good luck for her future life here on the Costa del Sol.

Adios, Phil

REFURBISHMENT

The Pueblo Evita team have been working in coordination with Dagmara and Mike Bailey to get the lounges of the four Elite Apartments in Block 11 converted to a new modern look. Many of the wooden windows in the apartments have been changed to aluminium and the barbeques have been upgraded.

Dagmara intends to continue refurbishing the bedrooms after the summer season. Hopefully in the future she will be able to continue modernising more of the older apartments.

We have also put in place new sofas and upholstered the armchairs in seven of the standard apartments in Block 8.

FIESTAS JUNE 2011

June the 24th is the day of San Juan. The celebration of San Juan is very famous throughout the province of Malaga. Big fires and fireworks are held along the beaches and people have a bath at midnight in order to emulate the first baptism given by St John. The action usually starts from midnight on the 23rd and it is a night filled with concerts, parties and good times all night long.

Another local celebration is Corpus Christi which stirs up the people of Benalmadena Pueblo. One of the attractions of this event is the spreading of flower petals and herbs on the streets by the people of the village on the eve of the procession. The aromatic perfume and the carpet of natural colour transforms the village streets and creates an evocative atmosphere.
